

and species with comments on foodplants and distribution in the European sector of the USSR, and adjacent countries. The keys are based on either external characters or genitalia and are copiously supported with illustrations of genitalia, wing venation, alar patterns, other structural features and selected drawings of larval feedings. Pest species are specially noted. The work concludes with a bibliography, list of common names of foodplants and species index.

Because of the dearth of information on microlepidoptera generally, this translation is particularly welcome. Many of the species described here occur throughout mainland Europe and into the British Isles, and in all probability a few of them are yet to be found in the UK. Because parts of the British fauna are understandably absent from this volume, the main value lies in the descriptions of species unavailable elsewhere and the clear illustrations of genitalia. Some species are remarkably cosmopolitan: for example of the 12 or so species of the Gelechiid genus Caryocolum known to occur in the UK, the genitalia of nine of them are illustrated in the work under review.

A few of the Russian words of the original translate rather unhappily into English, and the reader must take a sympathetic view of nomenclature — endings such as Prays fraxinellus rather than fraxinella; names we have sunk into synonyms still in evidence including, for example, the proud Lithocolletis. Some of the lists, such as foodplants, are rather strange until one realises that they were originally arranged in Russian alphabetical order. All these criticisms are trivial, as microlepidopterists have to be detectives as well if they are to find their way through the British literature, let alone that from overseas. We could wish for a volume such as this covering the British fauna, and the publishers are to be congratulated on making available this translation.

OBITUARY

RUSSELL FREDERICK BRETHERTON, C.B., M.A., F.R.E.S.

1906 - 1991

It is with great sorrow that we have to announce the death of Russell Bretherton on the 11th January at the age of 84, and only a few days after the death of his wife. He died quite suddenly from heart failure, but had suffered for some time from a respiratory disorder.

Born at Gloucester on 3rd February 1906, the son of a solicitor, Russell was educated at Clifton, and then at Oxford, where he was to become a Fellow of Wadham College. Then followed a distinguished career in the Civil Service, becoming Under-Secretary for the Treasury, and being awarded the Companion of the Most Honorable Order of the Bath.

Russell joined the British Entomological and Natural History Society in 1947, when it was known as the "South London"*. In 1967, he was elected President, from 1969 - 72 he served as Hon. Treasurer and in 1972 was made an Honorary Member. Of the Royal Entomological Society of London he had been a Fellow since 1944.

Russell was the author of well over two hundred publications on Lepidoptera, many dealing with migration, a subject in which he was especially interested. A full bibliography is appended. His fine collection he bequeathed to Reading Museum, together with his books and diaries.

Our deepest sympathy is extended to all his Family.

J.M. Chalmers-Hunt.
